

IEEE Chicago Members & Guests

The IEEE Technology Management Council and the IEEE Computer Society announce a joint meeting with the Association of Computing Machinery (ACM) and the International Council on Systems Engineering (INCOSE)

The Current Landscape of Patentability for Computer Implemented Inventions

This presentation explores the current landscape of patent eligibility, including Federal Circuit and Supreme Court decisions on eligible subject matter under 35 USC 101. This presentation also provides suggestions for how to prepare patent applications in view of the current landscape, including recommendations for the specification, claims, and drawings.

About the speakers:

John Nethery is chair of Brink's Electrical & Computer Group and has more than 15 years of experience strategizing and executing domestic and international patent prosecution for complex electrical and computer technologies. His experience includes performing technical analysis and claim interpretation of complex technology patents, and assessing validity and infringement positions for such patents.

Amir Penn is a shareholder at Brinks Gilson & Lione. He has substantial experience in procuring IP rights in the fields of semiconductors, nanotechnology, software related technology, medical devices and telecommunications. He is responsible for development of patent portfolios including preparation, prosecution and supervision of patent applications from filing to issuance.
